

CURRICULUM

Kick off your GW journey with like-minded students as a part of Harvest House: a food-focused community at no additional cost!

First-year students will engage in various community-building, educational, and engaging activities, as well as a food-focused curriculum. Harvest House members will be required to take

- Approved UW 1020 course (University Writing, required for all first-years), or a research seminar during their first semester.
- Students' second semester will feature an Introduction to Food Studies course.

HARVEST HOUSE

A living-learning community (LLC) in partnership with

Global Food Institute

THE GEORGE WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY

LOOK FORWARD TO

- Being part of a residential community of like-minded peers that fosters academic growth, connection, and community.
- Receiving an interdisciplinary education centered around culture, cuisine, community, and social justice
- Collaborating and networking with professional chefs, policymakers, academics, and innovators within the food and agricultural space
- Developing skills to assist you in adjusting to college life: kitchen safety, budgeting for a nutritious grocery trip, etc.
- Opportunities to access Harvest House's garden, chef-grade kitchens, and more unique facilities
- Developing and strengthening a cultural awareness through the lens of food
- Engaging with the DMV community through field trips and volunteer opportunities

LIFE ON THE VERN

Community

Enjoy living with your Harvest House peers on the beautiful Mount Vernon Campus! As the hub for GW's LLCs, community is central to the Vern's culture. You will not only belong to the Harvest House community, but the larger community of motivated students driven by their desire for change.

Facilities

Access to state-of-the-art facilities is what separates Harvest House from the typical student experience. A community garden, fully-equipped kitchens, nutritional education resources, and a 24-hour gym will be accessible for Harvest House members.

Transition to City-Life

Just a 15-minute VEX (Vern Express) ride from Foggy Bottom, the Mount Vernon Campus offers a quiet, safe space to unwind from the hustle-and-bustle of the city. With access to free transportation, the Vern is well-connected to the city, as well as sights like Rock Creek Park, the National Zoo, and the US Botanical Gardens.
